

I support media diversity

I believe the FCC needs to provide more venues and opportunities to inform the the general public (just not large media conglomerates) about your proposed rule to change that would allow ownership of print, broadcast, cable, and internet media in the hands of a few wealthy companies.

This course of action would bring less diversity to programming; and minimize the points of view available for one to consider. This, to me, would have a detrimental affect on what's left of our "democracy."

I saw a poll the other day that stated 72% of the American public is unaware of the this proposed rule change in media ownership, yet Mr. Powell (who should know something about exclusion) is refusing to delay his decision so the democratic process can work fully. Shame on you Mr. Powell.

I hope the responses you are receiving from the public causes a change of heart (though I doubt it). After all, Mr. Powell are not you and the FCC commission suppose to represent the PUBLIC interest.

Thank you,

Alvin Venning
